The fast-changing nature of work has prompted many Singaporeans to upgrade their skills to stay relevant. TODAY's Voices section is publishing first-hand accounts of young Singaporeans who have recently done so to give their careers a boost, or even pursue new paths in life.

In this instalment, Mr Hendra Roy Osland, 31, recounts his career move from tourism

Father and daughter go into nursing together

He might be 49, but Mr Joshua Liew, a former lecturer at Temasek Polytechnic's Centre for Character and Leadership Education, along with his 17-year-old daughter Ophelia Liew, have just entered their first year of nursing school.

While helping his daughter research her career options in nursing, he stumbled upon a professional conversion course for himself and
